Remember Clifton Strengths?

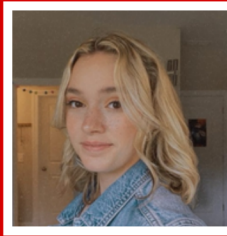

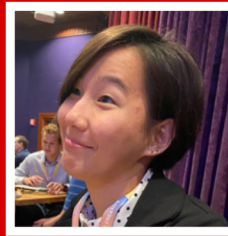

By Mia Yost-Kelly

Remember taking the Clifton Strengths test? Those strengths can be insightful, and the reports on the website can help explain how to best utilize these strengths in your life. For example, the “CliftonStrengths for Students Report” can even give you advice on how to study based on your top five strengths. As someone who has WOO (Winning Others Over), a recommendation I got for studying is to set aside time away from others to focus on my work, which is a practice I have implemented. Now I reward myself with social time after I have finished my work.

Scanning the QR code and logging in will take you directly to your strengths reports. Also, fun fact - you can put your CliftonStrengths on your resume or your LinkedIn profile because they are often widely recognized.

What's the Rush? By Morgan Peterson

"Are you rushing?" is a sentence we hear frequently during the Spring semester among our peers, but what is rush? As a freshman last year, I was not aware of what people were referring to. Who is rushing where? When? Am I rushing?

Rushing is what we call the process of joining either a college's fraternity or sorority. It is usually a week-long ordeal consisting of different social events and sometimes interviews. Most sororities and fraternities hold a rush week in the Spring, but some additionally hold one in the fall semester as well.

From my own rush experience, when I rushed for my now sorority Alpha Sigma Kappa: Women in Technical Studies, I attended a social event each night of rush week to get to know my potential sorority sisters and partake in fun activities. At week's end you may be invited to something referred to as Closed Rush, this is an event usually at the end of Rush Week where a sorority or fraternity invites you to a smaller event for candidates they are considering for admittance to the organization. After this, it is a waiting game to see if you get in!

Being a part of a sorority/fraternity can bring you plenty of benefits academically or socially depending on which one you pick. My sorority has brought me great friends and resources to succeed here at VT. Most sororities and fraternities will be or have started campaigning for their rush week events/interest events for the upcoming rush, I encourage you to check it out!
