POST-EXAM CHECKPOINT

Author: Kiara Klevar

As professors begin to give out tests, there are some things that you need to think about. The first test is always an eye-opener for everyone. When looking at your test grades, you should reflect on how you did. If you did well, consider having the same study skills you used on the first test for the second test. If you didn't do very well, consider changing your studying methods. There are many different methods that you can use and finding the one that helps you will aid you greatly when studying for tests. Some examples of study methods you can use are Spaced Practice, the Feynman Technique, and Mind Mapping. Sometimes studying for tests in college can be different than when you studied in high school. However, once you find the correct method that works for you, you'll be better off. Another thing you need to think about is if you are going to drop a class. The deadline to drop is the 27th of February.

This date is very important because if you drop a class before the deadline, it will not show on your transcript and it does not affect your GPA. If you are having difficulty with this decision, talk to your advisor. They are more than willing to give you advice. In addition, talking to them can help you plan out how you want your college years to go. They are an important resource. If you do drop a class, do not feel discouraged; numerous people drop classes for lots of reasons. Furthermore, next semester you can come back stronger when you have to take the class again. It also doesn't matter if you are behind your peers because in college there is no such thing as falling behind. College is meant to be taken at your pace. There is no getting ahead or behind your peers because, in reality, no one cares about it. You are doing your best and that is the only thing that should matter. You should be proud of yourself for just being an engineer because engineering is not for everyone.

MOE'S IS BACK

Author: Sid Somashekar

After being closed for a long time, Moe's is finally back! Moe's was closed for the majority of last semester, but it has opened up again for this semester. Some may be wondering, we have a Qdoba on campus and a Chipotle right off campus, why would we care about Moe's? Personally, as a Moe's enjoyer, I prefer it over Chipotle and Qdoba. Don't get me wrong, Chipotle and Qdoba are not terrible, but neither matches the ambiance and the service like Moe's does. Obviously, it is your opinion considering which place you like, but the thing I like most about Moe's is their free chips and salsa that come along with every order.

This is a key advantage that Moe's has over Qdoba and Chipotle, as they both charge extra for their chips. If you get a bowl from Moe's, you can use your bowl as a dip for your chips (which I always do). Moe's has an arguably extensive menu, and also has their own version of the crunchwrap called a "Stack". They even have their own drink called the "Moe-rita" that you can only get at Moe's. After numerous conversations on which place is better, I know that I may be in the minority as a Moe's supporter over its other 2 competitors. But, I will definitely be frequenting the Moe's whenever I crave Tex-Mex food. I definitely recommend checking out the Moe's which is just across the street from Chipotle if you've never had it or are just curious.

SPRING BREAK IDEAS

Author: Jiyeon Park

1. Go home and have fun with your friends and family!

After your exams, you need to get some rest and spend a good amount of time with your friends and family! You deserve it. Go out to eat, play, shop, or just drive.

2. Road trip with your friends

Spring break is about a week! What about going on a road trip with your friends? Drive up to Roanoke or even Northern Virginia if you are okay with driving 2 - 3ish hours! There are many cool places you can check out.

3. Chill in your room

If you are a homebody, you can binge-watch various shows, movies, or dramas that you might have missed during the semester. Read books, listen to music, sing, dance, or do whatever you couldn't do during the semester because you were so busy!

4. Think about next year or your future

This is a good chance to think about what you want to do for next year. Have you decided which major you want to seek? If not, it is a good idea to do some research and visit <https://eng.vt.edu/academics/undergraduate-students> to find out more about the majors/minors you are interested in!

Have a wonderful spring break!
